how bad we feel!

The cyclone that swept over the country on Wednesday night of last week, did not forget to pay some slight attention to Van Buren county. It struck the inhabitants of the valley about midnight and did considerable damage. J. W. Stuyvesant had a straw stack turned bottom side up, his barn somewhat racked and two apple trees and one pear tree blown down; Thomas Anderson had thirty fine, large apple trees uprooted and his barn partially wrecked; Mrs. Watson's shade trees were demolished, her barn unroofed, and her wagons blown away, and George Langdon's barn was turned one quarter around on its foundations.
